

TO THE RIGA - GAUJA REGION

ENIDE

It is also an invitation to savour the culinary diversity of the Riga-Gauja Region, because what is not available in city restaurants can be located in delightful farmers' markets (and vice-versa). Use our recommendations to experience the hospitality of our homesteads and artisan food producers.

It is hardly surprising then, that in 2017, we will be a European Gastronomic Region – we have much to offer both our own people and every European lover of fine food!

FOODS LATVIANS PREFER

Latvian cuisine could be called 'multi-layered' – just like one of our traditional dishes, the For gourmets, the year starts in spring with birch sap and maple syrup, whose just-tapped Latvian proverb has it that 'autumn is a rich man'; thereby the populace knows how Cold and damp weather in Latvia results in fare that is rich and filling, with character. Simseen as the primary influences, but Latvian cuisine maintains its link to nature, preferring chock full of vitamins.

RHUBARB

Latvia's proclaimer of the new gastronomic year. Every Latvian household has a Rhubarb The largest fish in Latvia, it can reach up to 250 kilos in weight. To make catfish more deliielly, Rhubarb ice-cream, Rhubarb Chutney, Rhubarb jam, Rhubarb salad, Rhubarb wine candied Rhubarb, etc.

SORREL

The first appearance of Sorrel obliges even hardened city-dwellers to go out into the meadows and seek these small, bright-green, vitamin-rich leaves, an unmistakable sign that spring has truly arrived. Latvians use Sorrel in many ways – for salads, soup, for breakfast with cottage cheese and many more ways.

BIRCH AND MAPLE SAP

patch, not only for its useful traits, but also for its good looks. Frequently used in large cate, one should leave a whole gutted catfish for two to three days in cold in order to serve amounts for gourmandian immoderations – Rhubarb pie, Rhubarb dumplings, Rhubarb 👚 a pinkish fish of light consistency. The fishbone can be used for making a strong bouillon.

SOUR CHERRIES

The sour cherries are excellent for one's health, as, besides amins and minerals, the sweet-sour berries contain a lot of melatonin, which helps the human body to fight aging and insomnia. Devoted housekeepers insist that a jam or wine should be made just from the sour ones.

BOLETUS MUSHROOM

We Latvians are a mushroom-foraging nation, and the boletus (porcini) is considered the pinnacle for modern-day hunter-gatherers. Simply sautéed with butter, braised in cream with new potatoes, marinated, sun-dried, a side dish for seafood, beef, as a pâté .. we could continue this delicious list forever! Remember though – the ones you pick Summertime is when Latvians are earthbound, to 'reap what it sows'- literally! The beautiful and scrumptious penny-bun mushrooms, ple but sturdy foods from garden vegetables and grains. Potatoes and barley, rye products gonberry jam, layered in a large glass. Polish, Swedish, German and Russian cuisine are winter hibernation, crave the first greens that sprout up - aromatic, succulent, crisp and so to speak, they have the uncanny ability to commune with Mother Nature. Nothing pro-just waiting to be picked or the abundant quince, that yellow fruit perfect for syrups or - through the centuries are a reminder of home fires burning. But what about the rowan berries? Beautiful and mildly tart - for a real taste of life.

RYE BREAD

It goes without saying: nowhere on planet Earth the rye bread is more delicious than in Latvia and one of contemporary Latvian cuisine's trademarks. Today Quince is an element Latvia, and it's taste is a result of our history, memories, dreams, and philosophy on the or of the culinary art, utilized as a marinade for lamb, a component of tangy homemade des- der of things. It's not surprising that rye bread is what every Latvian living abroad craves for.

ROWAN

Dried and powdered, the red-orange rowan berry is a subtle spice family's Saturday or Sunday dinner and served as tartare or steaks in select restaurants. ditive for your cocktail, it is the best that a berry can offer alcohol.

Making our noble contribution to the current renaissance in long forgotten herbs and veggies - we give you: the turnip, stupendous in stews! Or simply baked in the oven, but better yet – in a salad with smoked fish and nuts. The turnip – just doing what comes naturally!
